

Niches in Filmmaking– Stop Motion Animation, SHARANYA RAMESH

Sharanya Ramesh is a stop motion animator and an alumna of the Comn. Studies course. She came to talk to the third-year communication studies students on 30th of January, as an extension to the Film Making paper that they are already learning.

Her session was about introducing the students to the world of stop motion animation, which was done through seeing multiple projects that Sharanya has dabbled in, understanding the behind the scenes of each project. This was also done to let the students know about niche streams that one can take up under the big umbrella of Filmmaking.

We concluded the session with a brief question answer session, where all the students query on taking up niche streams, stop motion animation and timeframes of projects were answered. Overall, this was a very informative and eye-opening session for the students.
